

Like most universities that receive public funding, the University of Chichester is a charity, and raises income from a wide range of sources.

In addition to tuition fee income, which makes up 71% of our total income (UG & PG), we receive income from government funding, research partners, catering and student accommodation.

Our income is used to support delivery of high-quality, personalised and aspirational teaching in a learning environment that supports the student experience. It also supports our day-to-day activities including student services, library, student accommodation, dance and music studios, labs and sports facilities as well as research and enterprise activities.

Surpluses are reinvested into our University helping to improve and maintain our existing facilities and supporting new initiatives, making us financially sustainable for the future.

Further information on The University of Chichester's income and expenditure can be found in our financial statements.
